

In The News...

Buffalo News – 12/16/05

Protesters need to stop impeding development

Many people are against tearing down the H-O Oats grain tower so that the Seneca Nation can build a casino on the site. I hold an architectural degree, and believe that the city should save some of its historical structures and buildings so that future generations can learn about Buffalo's history. But there has to be compromise. Few people looked at the H-O tower as historic until it was slated for destruction.

Buffalo is a joke. People are wondering why this once great city is dying. It's because no one will let anyone build anything new without going through years of lawsuits, studies and protests. The people who want all this historical architecture saved should start purchasing the buildings themselves and restoring them to their original state if that's what they want. Do not waste taxpayer money stopping people from developing this city, Hoping to bring back the younger generation, who have left due to the lack of jobs.

Robert K. Carlson Jr.

Blasdell